Bridging the gap between Micro finance and retail

Having raised £17,000 from peer-to-peer platform Kickstarter, Fritha Vincent intends to use the money to expand her fledgling “Secret Pillow” business. As a child, Fritha began sewing quillows; a quilt with a pocket which enables it to become a pillow. Last year, a friend said she should sell them, and a month later, on a trip to India, Fritha saw fabrics, sewing machines, and women’s groups everywhere. PING!

Seeing a chance to empower these women with earning potential, Fritha’s “Secret Pillow” company now employs 86 women in 5 women’s groups in Kerala, India, and has sold 550 quillows since launching the business in July. £8 from each pre-ordered £35 sale goes to the seamstress – a good amount in their situation, and some of them are starting to design their own collections, which Fritha will buy and retail as stock.
